Falls of Bruar. The Bruar, a rivulet of Blair Athole Parish, N. Perthshire, descends in all from 1,800 to 2,000 feet in a level, and during the last two miles it successively forms three series of romantic falls. The first or highest series is threefold; the next, half a mile lower, is single, taking a leap of 50 feet; and the last is a succession of cascades and cataracts rather than falls, and nowhere more than 12 feet high.
